Usually, with proper care, a few broods

Usually, with proper rate, a few broods of chickens may be hatched very early, on almost any facin. When a Len wants to see, say may true in January, I give her a moderace mather of eggs and allow her to commence business. The first danger is that the sharp weather of January may chill the eggs, when the hen leaves the nest to search for road. If the hen house could be kept want by a store, it would undoubtedly pay, not only to protect the eggs of sitting heas, but to promote laying among the rest. When the first leggs latch, give the hen the warmest place you have about your premiswarmest place you have about your premises—some sput where she and the brood can reloy the sun when it shines, and where chilling winds do not reach her. The chileses will require a great deal of hovering and for the first week or two most hers will do their full duty in this respect towards their prements, but at the midel has done. their full duty in this respect towards their progeny; but at the end of ten days or a foreight, they will become more careless and less inclined to quiet. The true course, then, is to transfer the chickens to another hen just harching, if it be possible. In fact, to provide for this contingency, after setting the first hen of the season, others should be set every week or two through the cold season, partly with a view to the continued care of the first chickens. There will be no difficulty in making the transfer, if it he done feetly in making the transfer, if it he done ficulty in making the transfer, if it be done at night while the eggs are hatching, or before the heat leaves the next and has become familiarized to the appearance of her chickens. Black, white, speckled, strip-ed, large or small, are alike acceptable to ed, large or small, are alike acceptable to her, if she can be made to believe that she batched them. Hence, the hest time for making a good stepmother of her, is to put the chicks under her at night; but any other time before her own chickens become lively will do, pravided you make no special display of them so that she can compare them with her own brook. If you do, you will stand a good chance to fail.

For winter chickers, then, a new mother, as soon as the old ones become careless or "fussy," is the special need. The other requisites will be apparent. They cannot run out, but must be provided with the driest and warner, quarters persible, and have plenty of good food—cracked corn, scalded mest, backwheat, hay seeds—and at night must be made seems against rats, or any decrease of each. mest, buck wheat, hay seeds—and at night must be made seems against rats, or any danger of getting out of their nests and bring chilled to death. As to discuss, I do not find that they are more subject to them than later chickens; in fact, I raised a much greater proportion of those hatched last year in January, February, and very early in March, thou of those hatched, at later dates. With a good beconery, kept at a prefix equally temperature, (which I have not yet dided,) I should have small fears of plenty of eggs in mid winter, plenty of chickens in January and February, and very respectable profits from the business in April, May and June.

The Citizens' Association of New York has published a report containing valuable suggestions in relation to the transfer of the supplies labor of the East to the grain fields of the West. This is a most useful and opportuee measure; for the dans; populations of our cities are subject to a vast amount of suffering and crime in consequence of the want of employment and the small remuneration of labor, while the West Is conbarrassed every year in its agricultural business by a searchy of laborers. How to bring to gether this want and surplus is a question for political economy and practical philan-

The report alkaled to recommends the establishment, in New York, of a bureau of information, statistics and information, and the opening of a correspondence with the West to obtain information as to the demand for labor of the various kinds, and all the details recessary for the formation of a complete system. The bureau should receive applications for employment and be the channel of communication, between the labor market and the seeker of work to do. It is believed that incalculable relief and blessings may thus be conferred on thousands of persons each year, at a small

In order that the overburdened East, may supply this pressing used of the West, the report recommends the establishment of depots at the West for the distribution of laborers according to the necessities of the various localities. If this project can he carried into practical operation, without Jealousy or division of sentiment between the seystel sections, it will be a work of great beneficence both for the people who will be helped to homes and to the portions of the country relieved, one of its surplus and the other orbits went. A far greater benefit will be er nierred upon poor penple by giving them work to no, homes to live in and their bread to carn, than by supplying their wants, from hand to mouth, by charity. This project, or any other that will produce the desired results, is worthy of a trial and and will have the sympathy and cooperation of all who seek the welfare of all classes in spendy.

Opening of the Imperial Parliament-the Alabama Claims. The Grand Trunk Bailway. From Abyssinia &c.

London, Feb. 20th, 1868.

Emron Dana News :- Both houses of Thursday lost without any pomp or ceremony. After the previous short session and transually long aljournment, no formal proceedings were necessary and the business commenced in the usual manner, as towagh Parliament had been sitting, unlatermittingly and the two great political parties contending for power again stand face to face. The Teries with a resolution to healintain the position they have made gr at sacrifices , and the Liberals indigneal at the adoption of their own weapons

It would be agreeable to the inclinations of the former without doubt if the session were allowed to be a more interregum devoted to propositions for a graceful dissolution of the existing system of represents tion in the House of Commons and the election coming maneuvers, with respect to the new one which is to take place.

But there are measures which the Govermand stand pledged to produce and upon no pretence will they be allowed to halk the expeciations of the country. The whole of these measures will necessarily be warmly and closely discussed, and upon any one of them Ministers may be decated and compelled to give place to Statesmen who have a more legitimate claim to the honor of carrying reform hills through the legislature. The Scotch and frish Bills cannot nor will not be delayed. Hence the opening of the Imperial Parliament of 1868 may be boked to with hope and fear as to the result of its deliberations this year. The numers from Washington in Tegard to the Alabama claims created quite a newspaner sensation in town last week, the parport of which was that President Johnson was about to force matters in this case. It turns out however that President Johnson has made no such assertion and there is no manner of question but what the Alabama claims will be fairly and amicably scaled between England and America,
